“ I’ve waited a bit to send a note thinking his passing may be just a bad dream. George and I go back to 1969. George was a cook at the Willow Inn West in Glenview Il at the time, taking classes and working. I was attending college during the day and needed to work at night and a friend mentioned they might have a job opening so I was hired to wash dishes. We became friends right away. We had some interesting experiences together one could say. The first time I stopped by his parents home I was surprised to see the same beveled glass mirror hanging in one of their rooms that my parents had in their living room. I talked to his mom about it and found out that our families lived in the same neighborhood when we were little kids-and George and I were in the same kindergarten class! Small world! I recall his family was always welcoming to me and I enjoyed their company. His parents were very much like mine which we thought strange too. I was best man at his first wedding and my wife and I saw them as much as schedules allowed. I missed him when he moved to Florida but he did come to visit before his two dogs arrived. We talked or texted pretty much every day, the “have you got a minute” calls turning into an hour or more. I was never able to visit because of my wife’s ongoing health issue and he completely understood. The day Nancy called to ask if I’d heard from George I said no but I’d left messages and texts with no response. She immediately called for a wellness check and then gave me the bad news. We always thought we’d be able to see each other in person again. I missed him when my friend and am glad he was part of my life.

“ I will miss him texting me and asking if I had time for a quick call . And me saying yes and that quick call lasting a hour or so . I'll miss my weekly grocery store sales updates he would send me if he found a good deal.. I'll miss our gripe sessions we would have and catching up on the new Biden blunders. I'll miss trying thr different recipes he would cook and have me try. That man knew he could cook. I'll miss our breakfasts we would have before I would start work the days I came over to do whatever he needed done. I just really miss my friend. I love you and miss you my friend till we meet again..

“ My name is Glenda Brown, I met George in 1986 when we were both in FedEx courier training class together. We have remained friends ever since. George left for Florida and I moved to Georgia. We talked on the phone and most recently would text each other before, during, and after College Football games. The last text George sent me was on September 29th after the Georgia Bulldogs game. When I didn't hear from him after the game on October 5th, I texted George several times asking if he was alright but got no response. I even called his number and left a voicemail. When I found his obituary on the internet I was shocked. George was a wonderful person, and such a blessing in my life, I will miss him dearly. My thoughts and prayers are with you during this sad time. If you would like to reach out to me, my phone number is: 706-260-6092. I hope you find comfort in knowing how much George was loved and appreciated.
