“ Today, I'm remembering my Dad — a man who truly knew no strangers and whose heart was as wide and welcoming as the great outdoors he loved so much. He taught his children life's greatest lessons not through words alone, but through the way he lived — with strength, kindness, and endless generosity.

My heart is sad, but filled with gratitude for the Dad who gave all he had to everyone. He always seemed to know when to listen, when to encourage, and even in my darkest moments, he somehow found the right words to lift me up.

I will forever remember the warmth of his smile, the wisdom in his stories, and the love he shared so freely. His spirit lives on in every lesson he taught, every laugh we shared, and every moment we carry him in our hearts. I will love you forever and I know you are with our father in heaven. Until we meet again I will always remember the love you gave so willingly.
