“ She was my wife and my lover for many years...she was a good person. She just had a addiction..she should be remembered as the beautiful and sexy woman she was..she loved her girls..and I know deep down we always loved each other. I will miss her very much.. I am grateful that I got to enjoy her in the prime of her life ,youth and beauty.. She gave me the most precious thing a woman can give to a man and thats a daughter. I hope she can feel now how much I loved her.. I hope she knows I that I still love her.. And I feel hopeless without her presence in this plane of existence.. No more suffering for my lover of years past. No more suffering for my wife that I cared for.. No more suffering for are children that's mother was ravaged by addiction.. No more suffering for Tara Collins.... Who's plight was to live the life of the myth of Sisyphus...draging her boulder of addiction up the mountain of life only to have it roll right back down again so she could do it again the next day...and the next...and the next..and so on...ill always miss you Tara...you were all woman...thank you for showing me how to be a man.
